

What does the Scottish Social Services Council mean for people working with children and young people?

We want working with babies, children and young people to be valued as an important job that is done by skilled and trained professionals.

We want everyone who works with children to understand what is important to children and young people.

We will increase the status of the profession by ensuring a trained and trusted workforce.

We want managers to support their staff to do their job and help them improve their skills.

Family Worker

Care Worker

Out of School Care Worker

Social Worker

Link Worker

Early Years Worker

We will promote the standards that children and young people can expect from their workers.

We will help make sure the right people are in the right job with the right qualifications.

The SSSC's vision is that Scotland has a competent, confident and valued social service workforce.
Our aims are :

- to protect people who use services
- to raise standards of practice
- to strengthen and support the professionalism of the workforce.

We will help the workforce plan their career development.

The children and young people's workforce is an important part of the social service workforce.

We want people who work with children and young people to be trustworthy.

All of this will mean:

- trained and trusted workers
- a motivated and respected workforce
- opportunities for career development and career progression
- high quality services for children and young people that support them to achieve their potential.

If you would like to know more about the work of the SSSC visit www.sssc.uk.com